The distinction between law and gospel is a standard formulation in Reformed theology, though in recent years some have characterized it as distinctively Lutheran. Zacharias Ursinus sharply distinguished the law and gospel as "the chief and general divisions of the holy scriptures" in his commentary on the Heidelberg Catechism. Louis Berkhof called the law and the gospel "the two

The law of sacrifice is not as irrevocable, as say, the law of gravity. But as Frederick Douglass said: "A man, at times, gets something for nothing, but it will, in his hands, amount to nothing." For proof of this, see the cases of folks who win the lottery and then squander it all away. This is the beauty of the law of sacrifice.
